

Wingman's Hangar Question

Logo of Kong Interstellar filling the shot against a black background. Perhaps if an outline PNG is available, overlay it over a moving shot across the stars. Fade into the next shot.

HUGE

Hello Wingman! This is Kong
Interstellar Security Solutions coming at you from the across the verse!

Transition into a piece of Spider's concept art.

HUGE

After a nasty (ehem) legal battle with some third-rate knuckle draggers on Spider over who was the real 800lb Gorilla...

Explosion effect(s) emerging from a piece of infrastructure in Spider (hangar, windows, whatever). Transition into the next shot of a crying Atlas (done by Alex or Beakie or whoever) on a black background. A gif would be even better.

HUGE

We've apparently been evicted from the station! They didn't take to our superior problem solving skills.

Transition the Atlas from crying to pointing upwards as if he's had some sort of idea.

HUGE

But that's okay! You can't keep a good gorilla down. At the very least we did learn one thing, Wingman. And that's the importance of trademarks.

Shot of the Atlas suddenly surrounded by a great many Metal Babby's.

HUGE

So the band was wondering, as we tend to do...

Transition into a series of shots the Aurora, 300i, Hornet, Constellation, Freelancer, the Pilot's suit, etc. all with Kong logos over them. Fades and cuts and moving shots, etc.

(CONTINUED)

HUGE

Will it be possible for a corporation to pay a fee in order to trademark their logo within Star Citizen? So that they can then proudly display it on their ships... or gear... or even goods? As they vaporize their problems into star dust.

Transition in similar shots all without the logos.

HUGE

Or will we have to keep settling similar matters through Judge Colt and his jury of six?

Possibly change the saying to something more in line with Star Citizen. Using a weapons manufacturer from the game, and a greater ammo count or whatever. Transition back to the Kong logo.

HUGE

And remember! When you've got a gorilla sized problem that needs taking care of, think Kong Strong!